REVELATIONS OF ENGLISH CONVENT LIFE.

A Nun Sues the Sisterhood for Assault and Conspiracy.

An extraordinary suit has been brought in the Court of Queens's Bench in England. A Catholic nun, a member of the Sisterhood of Mercy, has sued her superior and the other nuns of her convent, for a conspiracy and assault to compel her to leave the sisterhood. The complainant says that the defendants wrongfully and maliciously conspired together to compel the plaintiff to cease to be a member by subjecting her to various indignities, persecutions and annoyances, by depriving her of the food and clothing to which, as a member, she was lawfully entitled, and by imprisoning her and keeping her imprisoned, and by preventing her from attending the services of the said church. And, further, that the defendants unlawfully and maliciously conspired to procure the expulsion of the plaintiff from the said religious house and order by making false charges of disobedience, contempt of authority and neglect of duty and other misconduct. That the Roman Catholic, dishop who, by the rules and constitution of the said order and lawful authority to act in that behalf, and to expel the plaintiff, did so. The plaintiff says that, in pursuance of the conspiracy the defendants did subject her to a long series of indignities, persecutions and annoyances, and did deprive her of food and clothing and of divers articles of her property. They also imprisoned the plaintiff to prevent her from attending the services, and made a false charge against her to the Bisop, whereby she was expelled from the order and lost all the benefits accruing from her membership.

For these indignities and losses the plaintiff claims five thousand pounds damages.

The defendents pleaded not guilty, and that the plaintiff was not a member of the order, and was not lawfully entitled to the privileges and advantages of the institution. And finally, that after the accruing of the matters of complaint and cause of action, the same was referred with all matters in difference to Robert Cornthwaite, who duly made and published his award that the alleged matters of complaint and cause of action had not, nor had any of them, accrued, and had not, nor had any of them, existed.

The plaintiff's case was thus opened by the Solicitor-General

I have the honor to appear in this case with my learned friends on behalf of the plaintiff, Miss S. Saurin, which will demand more than the ordinary amount of watchful and impartial attention upon your part, for the facts are strange and painful. First, as a revelation of human nature, next as a revelation of female nature, and as a revelation of conventual female nature, showing what women are capable of when they shut themselves up from their kind, and shut out the instincts of their better nature, and what mean and petty cruelties they can wreak upon their sister-women. The plaintiff and defendants are Roman Catholics alike. They are alike devoted to the belief and practices of the Roman Catholic Church

"The defendant is the superior of the Convent of Our Lady of Mercy at Hull; the plaintiff is a person of very good family, and connected with good families in Ireland, herself a person of great devotion, having two sisters nuns in different Roman Catholic orders, and having a brother a Jesuit priest, and an uncle a parish priest in Ireland, and brought up amongst Roman Catholic associations, and surrounded in every way by Roman Catholic influences of the best sort. From early youth she was desirous of entering into religious orders, but she was not persuaded to do so prematurely. Two of her sisters had already gone into convents, and her family, although religious, was not desirous that their third daughter should be devoted to the conventual life, and for some years they opposed her desire; but at last she obtained the consent of her mother, and with her uncle, a Roman Catholic priest, named Matthews, she visited several convents, to see what kind of habit of life she would like best, and eventually, in November, 1851, she entered the Convent of the Sisters of Mercy in Bigot street, Dublin, as a postulant. I ought to explain that this body of Sisters of Mercy is not, according to the Roman Catholic ideas, what is called an order strictly spoking, but something different and less strict. It is an institution, or congregation, and the vows and rules connected with it are so stringent as if it was what was called an order. For instance, they are allowed a great extent of external use fulness. None are immured. They never come out of doors. They give themselves up to praying, contemplation and other devotions, but Sisters of Mercy make themselves extremely useful in visiting the sick, instructing the ignorant, and other works of usefulness in the world. On the 5th of August, 1851, she took what was called the holy habit, and became a novice in the convent in Dublin."

The solicitor then read the vows which were required by the novice, and continued his narration as follows

"The defendants, Mrs. Starr and Mrs Kennedy, joined the convent about the same time as the plaintiff, Mrs. Starr taking the religious name of Sister Mary Joseph, and Mrs Kennedy that of Sister Mary Magdalen. After some time Mrs. Starr was removed to a convent at Clifford, in Yorkshire, of which she became the superioress, where she was joined by the defendant, Mrs. Kennedy, and also, after considerable opposition by her parents, by Miss Saurin, at Mrs. Starr's request, and with the special condition, made by her mother and acquiesced in by Archbishop Cullen, that she should return to Bagot street, Dublin, if she wished to do so. Things went happily for some time, until in the year 1861, the superioress, Mrs. Starr, became anxious to know what had passed between Sister Scholastica and her priest at confession. Miss Saurin declined to answer questions which she considered unusual, and from that moment she found that the demeanor of the superioress was changed towards her. She was watched by her and by the other sisters, and a course of petty annoyances was entered on which were continued down to her final act of expulsion. It was absolutely necessary for her, in the discharge of her duties in teaching children and attending the sick, to speak to those who were outside the walls of the convent, and yet one accusation against her is that she has communicated with externs. The nuns call us externs. She was accused of speaking to the patroness of the schools at Clifford (Mrs. Grimstone), and the Roman Catholic clergymen (Mr. Fenniston). She was obliged to rise at three o'clock in the morning. One charge was that she had a piece of calico, a pair of scissors, and some cotton in her cell, and all these things were duly recorded against her as offences, and notwithstanding they were alloned for by penances, they were raked up against her in the final accusations by which she was driven from the community. Her mother became anxious that she should be removed to Dublin, and wrote to that effect, stating she had Archbishop Cullen's permission for her to return; but Mrs. Star's reply was that the plaintiff could not go at that time, if she ever could, and reminded Mrs. Saurin that her daughter was not under the jurisdiction of the Archbishop of Dublin. This she said notwithstanding that Mrs. Saurin had stated that Mr Saurin was in bad health and wished to settle his private affairs."

"The learned counsel then entered into a detail of some of the petty persecutions to which this lady had been subjected during her sojourn in the convent, and which, he said, would be more particularly laid before the jury in her evidence. Amongst others was the sending her to a drawer, where a heap of her relatives' intercepted letters were accumulated, without permitting her to read any of them. At other times the giving of letters to her with passages obliterated, and which were snatched away almost instantly and destroyed, without her having the slightest chance of reading them. She was put to work of the most mental character, such as scrubbing the floor and cleaning the stones. On one occasion her hands were so chapped with the cold and the water that they were in sores. One of the sisters, commiserating her condition and sufferings, advised her to put candle grease to the chaps, in order to alleviate her sufferings, but on its becoming known to Mrs. Starr she insisted on her washing the candle grease off. She was made to lie on the bare boards of the bed, her straw mattress being removed, and with no covering. She was not allowed to sit down, except on the floor, and she often used to kneel in order to alleviate her sufferings."

These allegations were, of course, denied by the defendants, who accused the plaintiff of dishonesty, neglect of her duties, and lying. A mass of evidence, including a number of letters written by the various parties to the Bishop, and to the family of the plaintiff, were read. The further hearing of the case was adjourned.

THE SEWERS OF LONDON.

A City Under a City

A writer in the London Daily News, who made a trip through the sewers of London last month, thus describes what he saw:

"Through the kindness of Mr. Harwood, the engineer to the city, we had been handed over to an experienced and practical guide, who with a staff of workmen proceeded to introduce us to the sewers of London. Before visiting these places you must dress for the part. Long thick woollen stockings drawn up over the trowsers to the hips are covered by equally long greased boots, with heavy turn up flaps, like those worn by the old smugglers of the Stage. To a stout Guernsey shirt is added a smock or pinafore of blue flannel, fastened at the waist by a leathern belt. A tan-tail hat, like that favored by the dustman of the period, together with a pair of thick woollen gloves, completed the costume of the two strangers, who, with a select party of professionals, came out of the Guildhall, and drew themselves up to the trap-door in Gresham street, to the intense delight of the loungers at the public house opposite

"A descent of twelve or fourteen feet, hand over hand, by and on the iron rings already mentioned, and we are at what looks like the entrance to a wine cellar. Candles stuck into the ends of long sticks and flaring and sputtering untidily while carried in the hand, much as they are in tasting vaults, strengthened the vinous analogy; and we proceeded down some steps and through a narrow passage with a vague impression that we should shortly come upon blue and vats, and be called upon to express an opinion critically upon vintages. A few steps further and the use of the stout strong boots is apparent; for we are ankle deep in a black stream, and are, in fact, in the middle of the Gresham street main sewer. A brick tunnel with ample side space for one person to walk in, and in which you can stand nearly erect, a tunnel which is well ventilated, and where the bottom current is sufficiently strong to carry all before it.

"Such is the sewer. We walk up it in Indian file as far as the general postoffice, first exploring a black hole at the side which necessitated stooping almost double. Similar holes to the right and left, each contributing their subsidary streams, represent the various side thoroughfares 'That's Aldermanbury,' 'There's Wood street,' remarks our guide, as we pass the entrances to the various tunnels representing those places; while at intervals, and when we are near openings, light and sounds come down to us from above, fragments of conversation, the hoarse rumble of wheels, and the busy tramp of footsteps, all telling of the active city life beneath which we were burrowing. It is dark and damp, but not more unpleasant than might fairly be expected. Walls and roofs and sides are moist and slimy, and your footing is often soft and slippery—that is all. Our chief guide has a strong faith in the wholesomeness of sewers. That there is nothing unhealthy in their smell and nothing disagreeable in their interior, that the people employed in them enjoy good health, and that any objection strangers may raise must be put down to fastidiousness or inexperience, is with him a strong article of faith.

"We took the air close by St Martin's le Grand, and went below again at Newgate Market, where we visited a large underground tank from which water is let down for different sewers, cleansing and purifying all before it. It was quite empty during our sojourn, and the machinery for working its iron doors opening by huge screws worked from above—were easily and comfortably examined. We saw no rats, and learned that the drain pipes used now have considerably diminished their numbers. It being no part of our present purpose to describe what has been often told already—namely, the system upon which the sewage of London is carried away—we shall confine ourselves to saying simply that we were taken under Farringdon street west where the Fleet Ditch was running in two swift black streams, almost below the footway on each side, some three feet six inches deep, and with so strong a current that we were assured it would be impossible to save the life of any one who stepped or slipped into them. These foul streams recalled the ancient Styx, and made one hold back with something like a shudder.

"In the course of our inspection we saw more flushing gates, artificial falls of water, traps, and locks, but we were below ground, not to examine or to report on these, but to realize the strange fact that there is a complete city under the city, and that every street and lane has its counterpart below, up which you may wander, while shut out from the world above, as if you were temporarily in your grave. Men have been lost in the sewers not workmen, but fellows who have stolen down the main holes for predatory purposes, and who have been as grievously disappointed as the people who come to London fancying it paved with gold. There is something almost awful in the thought of wandering alone dumbfounded and despairing in these vast solitudes, hearing the sounds of human life above you, and failing to make your agony heard. But to visit sewers under such guidance as we enjoyed is simply to attain a novel experience, and to come to the surface besmirched and dirty, but without accident or risk."

All Sorts

Mme Beival, who by her timely intervention saved the life of the Duc de Bauffremont, whom the lover of his wife tried to poison, complains of the ingratitude of M. De Bauffremont, who, she says, would not even give her his photograph.

A French chemist lately took a pair of stockings imported from England, dyed a brilliant red, extracted the coloring matter, inserted it under the skin of a dog, and had the satisfaction of seeing the animal die in twelve hours. He then took the coloring matter out of the dog's body, and with it died a skein of silk. He warns everybody against the use of "coraline," the dye used, and proposes the prohibition of the importation of red stockings from England.

Gustav Freytag, the author of "Debt and Credit," says the report that he was at work upon a novel, the scene of which was laid partly in Germany and partly in America, is devoid of foundation. He acknowledges that his knowledge of the United States is too limited to justify him in writing about them.

The Rev Mrs. Bullam, of Chicago, announces herself as president of the "New American Church," which is regularly formed, and now contains three hundred members. The new church is a "woman's-rights" church. The Deity is addressed as the "Divine Family. Lord the Mother, God the Father, Christ the Son, and Soul the Daughter."

Peter Sinclair, whose death in the streets of Chicago from heart disease has been announced was a very prominent man in Scotland, and indeed, throughout England. He resided years before he came to America in the neighborhood of Edinburgh, and had for his neighbors Hugh Miller and DeQuincy, of whom he told many amusing and interesting anecdotes

Five or six noted Chinese burglars recently arrived in San Francisco. They have been recognized by their fellow Chinamen, who are eager to have them arrested. They use an anæsthetic which is said to be much more powerful than chloroform. One instance of its use in San Francisco has already occurred.

Miss Dickinson records with pride that "at the recent Milwaukee she convention, Mrs Livermore said to a dapper little fellow about four feet high, 'Why, my good little man, I could pick you up and run away with you'"

Archbishop Magee on one occasion told his hearers—members of the Church of England that they ought to be thankful that their creed and ritual separated them as widely from Geneva as from Rome, and that the Dissenters had "a religion without a church," and the Catholics "a church without a religion."

The correspondent of an English paper writes: "I understand that her majesty's health is anything but good, and she herself contemplates the public duties awaiting her with a nervousness approaching to dread. All in-door ceremonies have a depressing effect upon her, and standing for any length of time leads to violent attacks of sickness and faintness."

A Bill in Which Oil Producers are Interested.

There is a bill before the House, in our State Legislature, entitled "an act to protect life and property, etc.," which provides for the appointment by the Governor of an Inspector General, whose duty it shall be to inspect, or cause to be inspected, on or before the first day of May annually, every steam boiler in this Commonwealth, excepting locomotive and low pressure boilers. The bill also provides that he shall give a certificate to the owner of said boiler, which shall set forth the condition of the same. The bill further requires the owner of each and every boiler to place thereon a lock up safety valve and a low water indicator, with whistle attached, at a cost not to exceed fifty dollars, the inspectors' fees being four dollars annually on each boiler.

Such a law as this would make the office of Inspector General no sinecure in this State, where factories and oil wells, and mills and machine works generally, are so innumerable. It is estimated that the enforcement of this law would inflict a tax on the productive and mechanical industry of this State amounting to millions of dollars annually. The oil miners of this region would be required to pay nearly two thousand dollars annually. We can hardly suppose that life and property can be made much more secure by this sort of legislation. Accidents from boiler explosions are usually the result of human ignorance or neglect, which no laws can effectually guard against. The manifest self interest of every owner or engineer will lead him to use all reasonable and necessary precautions against boiler explosions. A simple safety plug in the crown sheet of each boiler, costing not to exceed three dollars, will secure the object sought to be accomplished by this bill. The bill would seem, therefore, to be in the interest of the manufacturer of the lock up safety valve and low water indicator, with whistle attached—an appendage which is the patent of a certain New York firm. This is probably "the cat in the meal." At least, we hear of no petitions asking for the passage of this bill, from parties or classes whose lives and property are said to be so kindly and patronizingly cared for and protected by its provisions. On the other hand, we understand there will be a remonstrance sent in, from this quarter, at least, against such onerous taxation. We question very much the Constitutionality of an enactment which would seem to invade the domain of the private rights of the citizen. Why not require Ashcroft's or some other man's lightning rod to be approved by an inspector general to be attached to our houses? Why not make it a offence, punishable with fine and imprisonment to dump live coal ashes into any barrel, but Ashcroft's patent, metallic, anti-combustion ash pail? Seriously, we trust this bill which under the plausible guise of philanthrophy, is in fact a most iniquitous scheme for plundering the mechanical interests of our State, to put money in the pocket of some ingenious and enterprising patentee. The producers of the oil region look to Messrs. Ames & Duncan to use all honorable means to kill this proposed bill.

Court Rules in Venango County.

At an adjourned term of Common Pleas held on Wednesday, March 3, 1869, the following rules were read and adopted, to take effect from this date:

First—Amendment to Rule No. 15 by adding the words: "In all actions of Scire Facias on Mechanic's Lien, no judgment shall be entered in default of affidavit of defense, unless service has been made on all the owners named in the claim, or an appearance been entered for all the owners."

Second—Amendment to Rule No. 165 by adding the words, "nor before the writ and return is filed in the Prothonotary's office."

Third—The following Rule: "No appearance de bene esse shall be entered in any case. An appearance entered of record, for any defendant, with or without qualification, shall be deemed an unconditional appearance."

Special forms of the courts were ordered for the fourth and fifth Mondays of May, 1869, for trial of civil cases.

APPROPRIATIONS BY THE FORTIETH CONGRESS.—Among the appropriation bills which were passed by the Fortieth Congress, were the following:

For the Post Office Department, $30,297,153—including $14,320,053 for foreign and domestic mail transportation; $4,546,000 for pay of postmasters; $3,000,000 for pay of clerks; $1,000,000 for carriers; $500,000 for postage stamps and envelopes; $100,000 for detective service; $1,000,000 for the money order department; and no less than $5,750,000 to cover the deficiency in the revenue of the department.

Every Saturday, for March 20th, contains: He Knew He was Right, by Anthony Trollope; New Uncommercial Samples, by Charles Dickens, v.; Straws for Drowning Men, by James Greenwood; Players and Lookers on, by Dora Greenwood, (concluded); On the Natural Value of Different Sorts of Food, by Baron Liebig, (second paper); Hetty, by Henry Kingsley, (chaps. x. & xi.); Foreign Notes. Hurd has it.

John A. Rawlings.

John A. Rawlings, the newly appointed, duly confirmed, qualified, and now (acting Secretary of War, is a Brigadier General in the regular service, and Chief of Staff of the armies of the United States. He was a young lawyer, living in Galena, Illinois, the residence of Grant and Washburne, at the beginning of the war. He is said to be a man of humble birth and self-education. He was the Douglas candidate for elector in 1860, and when the South seceded, his Democratic friends said to him: "It is an abolition fight; do not mix in; if you do, you will injure our party." "I don't know anything about party now. All I know is, traitors have fired on our flag," was the reply of Rawlings. In Richardson's "Personal History of Grant," he describes a war meeting which was held by the citizens of Galena after Sumter had been fired on, at which Grant was present. Washburne offered a series of resolutions, concluding: "Finally, we solemnly resolve, that having lived under the Stars and Stripes, by the blessing of God, we propose to die under them," and at the same meeting, the Democratic lawyer, Rawlings, made a stirring and eloquent appeal in favor of the resolutions. The following was the fervent climax of the orator: "I have been a Democrat all my life; but this is no longer a question of politics. It is simply country or no country. I have favored every honorable compromise; but the day for compromise is past. Only one course is left for us. We will stand by the flag of our country, and appeal to the God of Battles." The effect of this speech on the audience was electric. And that night as Grant walked home, he said to his brother, "I think I ought to go into the service." And he went. The next we hear of Rawlins, he reported for staff-duty at Cairo, as Assistant Adjutant General to Grant, with the rank of captain. The securing of Rawlins on his own staff proved most happy. To great promptness and singularly clear judgment, he added unselfish patriotism and practical loyalty to his chief. Of all the able and devoted men, whom Grant's sagacious knowledge of men called to responsible and difficult positions, few have rendered the country such signal service as John A. Rawlins. He has been a member of Grant's military family from that day to this, and held the most intimate and confidential relations with Grant, both personally and officially. That he should be invited to a seat in the Cabinet will occasion neither surprise nor regret, and that he possesses peculiar qualifications for the position of Secretary of War by reason of his legal training as well as military experience is apparent to all.

City Election—The Nominating Caucuses

Pursuant to call, the electors of the several wards held Union caucuses on Saturday evening, March 13, for the purpose of nominating candidates for Ward officers and electing delegates to a City Convention for the nomination of a People's candidate for Mayor.

Assessor—Norman Pyler.

On motion no instruction to delegates to City Convention.

On motion the meeting adjourned.

E. C. BISHOP, Chairman.

BENJ. B. LIPPINCOTT, Clerk.

Supplement to the General Pipe Bill.

The legislative committee of the Board of Managers of the Petroleum Producers' Association have approved the following supplement to the general pipe bill which was introduced into the House last week, and which we published last Thursday. In the bill it was made necessary to form a company before a pipe could be laid; but, according to the specifications of the supplement, any individual or company can lay a pipe after complying with certain salutary requirements.

Section 1. That upon the petition of the owner or owners of any oil producing lands in this Commonwealth setting forth that he, she or they is or are desirous of constructing a pipe for the transportation of oil from such lands to any railroad or navigable stream through or under the lands of any other person or persons, and describing the proposed route of such pipe as nearly as may be, and giving the name or names of the owner or owners of the lands through or under which it is proposed to construct such pipe, the Court of Quarter Sessions of the county in which such lands are situated shall appoint five disinterested freeholders of said county, who, or a majority of them, shall be sworn or affirmed to faithfully perform the duties required by this act, and, having first given at least ten days' notice of the time and place of their meeting to enter upon the performance of their duties to the owner or owners of the lands through which the petitioner desires to construct such pipe, or to the agent or attorney of any absent owner, or to the guardian or committee of any owner under legal disability, shall proceed to view the lands of the petitioner or petitioners and the proposed route of the pipe which he, she or they is or are desirous of constructing, and if they or a majority of them shall be of opinion that such pipe is necessary for the convenient and economical transportation of oil produced on the petitioner's lands to market, they shall proceed to estimate and determine what amount of damage is likely to be done to the owners respectively of the lands through which such pipe is supposed to be constructed, by the constructing, maintaining and operating thereof, and make report thereof to the said Court, and they shall annex to their report a plot or map of the route of the proposed pipe, noting thereon the improvements, if any, through which the pipe shall pass. If the Court shall approve the report it shall be confirmed, but if exceptions be filed to the whole or any part or parts of the report and it shall be set aside the Court shall appoint other like qualified viewers who shall proceed in all respects as hereinbefore directed, or direct a review by the viewers first appointed.

Section 2. Upon confirmation of the report of reviewers as the case may be, and payment by the petitioner or petitioners to the owner or owners of lands through which the proposed pipe is to be laid, or in case of the absence or refusal of any such owner, into Court, of the sum or sums awarded to such owner or owners respectively and of all costs of the proceedings, it shall be lawful for the petitioner petitioners, his and their heirs and assigns to construct, maintain and operate along the route proposed and described in the petition and map accompanying the report of viewers, a pipe for transportation of his or their oil and the same take up and remove when no longer required for the purpose aforesaid.

Section 3. The said Court shall fix and determine the amount of compensation to be paid to the viewers appointed in pursuance of this act, which shall be paid by the petitioner or petitioners.

Section 4. It shall be lawful for the owner or owners of any oil producing lands in this Commonwealth to construct such pipe along or under any public road or highway, provided that he or they shall not obstruct travel on such public road while constructing such pipe, and shall forthwith put and leave such road in as good condition after the construction of the pipe as it was before.

The supplement is as unobjectionable as the general bill, and if the Legislature passes the bill, it ought also to pass the supplement. The producing interest is now represented at Harrisburg by a committee appointed by the Managers of the Producers' Association, which will urge upon the Legislature the passage of the bill, and the benefits that would result to the producing interest and to the State therefrom.

It cannot be that the Legislature can afford to make discriminations in favor of existing pipe and railroad companies, to the injury of the producers and to the detriment of the State and the nation. For the past year, under existing railroad and pipe monopolies, the great fluid, product of the State has paid on an average about $2 50 freight charges per barrel for transportation to the seaboard, which sum is twice as much as it ought to have paid, and in all probability, twice as much as it would have paid if there had been a general pipe law. The loss then to the producing interest, was $1.25 on each of 3,000,000 barrels. But this was not all. The general government sustained an immense loss during the last half of 1868 by the starting up of the shale oil refineries of the United Kingdom and the competition of the production of them with Petroleum, because of this $1 25 per barrel freight charges more than ought to have been paid. The shale oil refineries are still in operation, and the general government is losing heavily, and at a time, too, when the foreign trade balance is largely against us. Will the Legislature, by refusing to pass the general pipe bill, discriminate against its own State, against the general government, and in favor of a handful of greedy monopolists and the shale oil refiners of Europe?

THE many admirers of that fearless champion of human rights, Wendell Phillips, will regret to learn that his faculties are seriously impaired. We are not informed as to the cause or nature of the complaint, but judging from the following extract, from a recent article in the Anti-Slavery Standard, we are led to believe that the superinducing cause is softening of the heart.

We have felt and said that the course of Gen. Grant was open to grave criticism. But we have always judged him by his actions; always allowing that he meant all he said and would do all he promised. We propose the same rule in time to come. We shall take his word for earnestly meant; and we shall wait for action before we criticise him in his new office.

As Wendell was never known to "wait" on anything or any one, but on the contrary always made a suppositious case, or jumped to a conclusion which enabled him to display his rare skill at analysis, we can only "judge" his present lamentable condition "by his actions." When Phillips can't grumble, he is in a desperate condition.

AN IMPROVEMENT.—We as publishers are always glad to notice an improvement, especially if it benefits our readers. The improvement referred to is the Sanson magnesium pen. Mr. Sanson, the inventor of this pen, is now staying at the Crittenden Hotel. We have tried the pens and can recommend them.

Now and Then.

A Washington correspondent details the following characteristic incident of the late Inauguration ceremonies:

"It seems as but yesterday when, in the first year of the rebellion, General Cameron, who was then Secretary of War, left the department, in consequence of his recommendation to employ colored troops. He was almost alone in his estimate of the magnitude of the contest upon which we were just entering, grasping the subject in its fullest proportions. The most advanced of all the statesmen who were his compeers were far behind him. He saw the advantage of liberating the slaves and employing them promptly, while it took years to convince his countrymen of the necessity. It was a proud recollection to him, doubtless, to-day, when seated in the Senate Chamber alongside of the great chieftain who led the armies, including the colored troops, to our final triumph, and who was able to make these people so available in securing our success, that he had taken his course so early and earnestly in the right direction.

After the inauguration ceremonies I sat by General Cameron's side. As we watched the procession that escorted General Grant to the White House to enter upon the duties the performance of which will doubtless lead to the final pacification of our country, and listened with the deepest interest to his utterances in relation to his early efforts to give such a direction to the war as would certainly lead to the abolition and overthrow of slavery, is it any wonder that he was gratified with such a scene as this? You would have been interested, as I was, if you could have heard him exclaim, "This is a most interesting sight to me. Only seven years since I recommended the emancipation and employment of negroes as soldiers, and in consequence of which I left the Cabinet, being too far in advance of my associates. Now, to see a body of those soldiers joining in the Inauguration ceremonies, and escorting the President to the White House, is a gratification beyond all power of expression; and as I stood beside the President on the platform, and heard him announce in bold, unmistakable terms that these people should all have the ballot, the change seemed almost too marvelous for belief. It is the most gratifying scene of my life, and it is enough to have lived to witness it."

Petroleum Items.

Last week a new twenty-five barrel well was struck on the Hess farm, Cherrytree run. It is owned by Messrs. Overy and Palmer.

A few days ago a new thirty barrel well was struck on the Palmer tract, in the north eastern part of the Pleasantville district.

A new well, on the Poor farm, between Oil creek and Upper Cherry run, owned by Mr. Gardiner, Superintendent of the Peoples' Petroleum Company, is now in process of testing. The prospect of the well producing in paying quantities is considered fair.

The Messrs. Howe, of Oil City, struck a new twenty barrel well last week on the Jack tract, in the northern part of the Pleasantville district, about thirty rods west of the general line of the oil belt.

PROFESSOR HENRY SUTTER'S

Conservatory of Music,

Main street, between Fifth and Sixth streets.

JAMESTOWN, N. Y.

Professor SUTTER would announce to the public that he has engaged the services of Professor Mad'd, generally acknowledged to be one of the finest baritone singers of Germany, as teacher in the Vocal Department, and Dr. Winter as instructor on the Pianoforte for the ensuing term. Both gentlemen are Musicians of the highest order, and by this arrangement he hopes to be able to accommodate all who wish to avail themselves of the superior advantages offered by this Conservatory, which is unsurpassed by any like institution in the United States.

Professor Sutter's health has been impaired for some time past, partly owing to his extraordinary exertions to accommodate the great number of pupils desirous of obtaining instruction. He is happy, however, to be able to state that he is now fast recovering from his unfortunately protracted illness and will be able to personally superintend and labor with all the classes.

SPRING TERM—The Spring Term for all classes begins on MONDAY, THE 15th OF MARCH.

CLASS I.—TEACHER'S DEPARTMENT.

Piano, 36 Private Lessons	$24 00

Piano, 24 Private Lessons	18 00
Piano, 24 Lessons in Class	12 00

Teachers—Miss CARRIE HOWARD and Dr. WINTER.

Applications should be made at Professor Sutter's residence, or by letter, as early as possible.

Ten Boarders can be accommodated in the house, where also French and German are taught in connection with music. All of the musical compositions of Professor Sutter can be had in any quantity at George Brown's Music Store, No. 34 Main Street.

Sound Calculation.

[A blind mother sits in her cottage, inside her pretty daughter, and cautions her against love, while all the time an amatory scene is going on between the girl and the very lover whom the old dame dreads.]

Daughter, while you turn your wheel
Listen to the words I say
Colin has contrived to steal
Your unthinking heart away.
Hark the flattering voice he uses—
You are all the blind one's care,
And I mark your cheek's colour
Our young neighbor's name is heard.
Colin's tongue is false, though winning—
Hist! the window is unbarred!
Ah! Lisette, you are not spinning!

The room is close and warm, you say;
Nay, my daughter, do not pray
Through the casement, night and day—
Colin there his watch doth keep.
Think not mine a gambling tongue;
Ah! little at my bidding you hung—
I, like you, was free and young;
And I know how apt is love
To lead the youthful heart to ranging—
Hark! at the door—I hear I know!
Ah! Lisette, you are not spinning!

It is a gust of wind, you say,
That has made the hinges grate,
And my poor, old, growling Tray,
Must you break for that his pate?
Ah! my child, put faith in me;
Age permits me to foresee
Colin soon will faithless be.
And your love to an abyss
Of grief will be the sad beginning—
Bless me! sure I heard a kiss!
Ah! Lisette, you are not spinning!

'Twas your little bird, you say,
Gave that tender kiss, just now;
Make him cease his trifling, pray
He will rue it also, I vow.
Love, my girl, oft brings pain,
Shame and sorrow in its train,
While the false, successful swain
Scorns the heart he has beguiled
From true virtue's path to sinning—
Hist! I hear you move, my child
Ah! Lisette, you are not spinning!

You wish to take the air, you say,
Think you, daughter I believe you?
Bid young Colin go his way,
Or, at once, as bride receive you
Let him go to church, and there
Show his purpose to be fair
But till then, beside my chair
You must work, my girl, nor heed
All his vows so fond and winning
Tangled in love's web, indeed!
Lisette, my daughter, mind your spinning

Griffin's Patent

WATER PACKER.

This is one of the most useful Patents for oil operators ever invented. It has several advantages over any other Steel Pag or Water Packer 1st It can be put in much quicker and is instantly ready for operation there is no waiting for wood to swell, and by its quick action the well is kept clean 2d It can never fasten tubing or casing in a well so that it cannot be taken out readily.

EVERY OTHER PACKER IN USE HAS FASTENED STRINGS OF TUBING AND CASING, SO THEY CANNOT BE DRAWN FROM THE WELL.

3d. It is so constructed by means of a left hand screw thread that it can be loosened in a few minutes and removed from the well without difficulty. Even the caving in of the rock above the packer will not prevent the casing being drawn out readily. It can be taken out and put back without repairs.

4th. This is the only Water Packer in use that has a Patent on, all others being an infringement upon the rights secured by letters Patent granted by the United States to Anson D. Griffin, August 13th, 1867. The Packer is now offered to the public at the low price of Twelve Dollars each, and the money will be refunded by us or our agents to all parties buying them who are they do not give entire satisfaction with Electricity

GEO. M. MOWBRAY,

Superintendent of Blasting Nitro-Glycerine at the Hoosac Tunnel, Massachusetts.

(COPY.)

OFFICE ADAMS, MASS., Feb. 17, 1869.

Geo. M. Mowbray, Esq.,

DEAR SIR: It is the wish of the Commissioners that you take entire control of the blasting, while introducing Nitro glycerine. They wish you to be responsible, that no accident may happen.

Please give such orders, as you deem best in regard to it. I have notified C. A Brown to see all instructions from you and to report to you. I shall give no orders nor advice to him but leave him fully under your control. Yours very truly.

W. P. GRANGER, Engineer in charge.

The terrible loss of life which had invariably attended the introduction of Nitro glycerine, probably suggested the above communication, and the fact that no injury to life or limb occurred with Nitro-glycerine, during the past year at the Hoosac Tunnel, although we blasted over two thousand charges a month, is the best guarantee I can offer to proprietors of oil wells, who may wish this explosive tried in their wells. I shall spare no pains, care, or outlay, to attain the best results, and having erected works on Church Run, which have to-day been tested, and found to make Nitro glycerine more powerful than any produced by other parties, or imported, is safer to handle, and having the advantage of witnessing its effects in rock blasting, I hope to deserve the confidence of well operators, pledging myself that the full charge stipulated for shall in every case be exploded in their wells, or no payment will be asked. Address by mail or telegraph,

GEO M MOWBRAY, Titusville, Pa.

To prevent delay, please notify a few days in advance, when practicable.

PETROLEUM IRON WORKS, TITUSVILLE, Jan 19, 1869.

T. McCAMBRIDGE, ESQ.—DEAR SIR—We have one of Samuel Rue & Co.'s patent injectors in use in our establishment for the last six months, and we take pleasure in saying that it gives entire satisfaction, and would recommend it to all parties. It is simple in its construction and its working is as easily understood as the common force pump, it never gets out of order and is always ready to pour water into the boiler when required.

BRYAN, DILLINGHAM & Co

MONITOR OIL WORKS, PETROLEUM CENTRE, Pa., Jan. 23, 1869.

MR. McCAMBRIDGE—DEAR SIR—We have used, and are still using, your patent steam injector with the most satisfactory results, and can cheerfully recommend it as the most perfect and simple we know of, and would not be without one under any circumstances.

Yours truly, M. L. BATES & Co.

TO OIL OPERATORS.

I have invented a new and useful instrument for

Searching and Scraping

the walls in Oil Wells, removing the Paraffine or other substance from the sides of wells, and indicating the locality of any Crevice, be it ever so small. This has been used in a number of Wells, and all who have seen its workings pronounce it to be far preferable to anything now in use, as it will make the same record in coming up as when lowered into the well, and the same the second time as the first, and will not indicate a Crevice for every Spall that may have been broken out of the rock when the well was being drilled, and thus lead the well owners to Explode Torpedoes or Take their walls in the wrong place and occasioning a great expenditure of time and money without any beneficial results.

CREVICE SEARCHER & SCRAPER

I will guarantee to all who may favor me with their Custom, that they will be satisfied that the record furnished them of their walls is correct and reliable.

All orders directed to me at Titusville, Box 480, or left at my residence on Church Run will be promptly attended to. ELIAS BEACH.

NOTICE.

On and after February 1st the rates from all points through the pipes of the Allegheny Transportation Co.

ADVANCED TEN CENTS PER BARREL.

This advance is occasioned by the high price of oil, which makes the unavoidable loss attending the transmission of oil through pipes a large percentage of the present freight. Should oil decline in price materially the rate will be again reduced, and it is hoped that our patrons will treat us with the same liberality as heretofore. ALLEGHENY TRANSPORTATION CO.
